THE ELASTICITY

OF THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

AN INTERESTING DOCUMENT.

The following is the Four Hundred Dollar prize essay written by Prof. T. A. Baker, while at Columbian University, Washington, D. C., June 1903.

To this great Judge, more than to any other, are we under obligations to know what our government rests today upon a broad, firm, and durable foundation. As was further said in the above address of Judge Dillon of Marshall, judgments upon the national Constitution.

"Nor does the conclusion by any means suggest a superiority of the judicial to the legislative power. It only supposes that the power of the people is superior to both, and that where the will of the Legislature, declared in its Statutes, stands in opposition to the principles and theory of our government, it is entirely void, is yet far from completely obligatory."

The Federalist No. 78 on this same subject says:

"They are to regulate their decisions by the fundamental law rather than by those which are not fundamental."

This reasoning seems to be so conclusive, that it is difficult to understand now how it could have been open to criticism, but until the case of Marbury vs Madison it was an unsettled question whether or not the Supreme Court could adjudge an act of Congress unconstitutional. It is true the people were in the Constitution, and statute law, extending across the continent to the Pacific; but a direct appeal to them over every question of doubtful construction would have been absurd in the extreme, and we can believe, had it been done, our government would long ago have fallen a victim to the party of contending parties. It is fortunate that we have an "ultimate arbiter," acting in the name of the people and for the people, to check the excesses of party spirit and arbitrary power.

It was fortunate for us for the world, that such a high priest of the law was given at the time to expand the Constitution, and direct us to the safe and solid ground upon which we stand.

The Constitution was a new and untried experiment in government, with its dual system, State and National. As Mr. Jefferson said in one of his letters:

"Our revolution presented us an alibi upon which we were to write what we pleased. We had no occasion to search into many records, to lay up a great number of quotations to support our laws and institutions of some barbarous ancestry. We appealed to those of nature and found them engraved on our hearts. Yet we did not avail ourselves of all the advantages of our position. We had never been prepared to exercise self-government. We failed to assume it we were novices in its science. Its principles and forms had entered little into our former education."

Some of the most important cases that the Supreme Court has been called to decide involved the relation of the general government and State governments to each other. An authority like Mr. Jefferson said:

"I ask for the striking of words against the general government, not against the States. I believe the States can best govern our home concerns, and the general government our foreign ones. I wish, therefore, to see maintained that wholesale distribution of powers established by the Constitution for the limitation of both."

It was upon this theory the government of the Constitution was established. Further on the letter, commenting upon the decisions in Marbury vs Madison, and Cobens vs the State of Maryland, which did not meet his approval, he says:

"But the Chief Justice says there must be an ultimate arbiter somewhere. True, there must be; but does that prove that the ultimate arbiter is the people? The ultimate arbiter is the people themselves, by their deputies in convention, at the call of Congress or of two thirds of the States. Let them decide to which they mean to give an authority claimed by two of their own."

The Chief Justice held that the Supreme Court was the arbiter selected by the Constitution, and the former case, said:

"It is emphatically the province and duty of the Judicial department to say what the law is. Those who apply the rule to particular cases must necessarily expound and interpret that rule. A code in detail is not made for every court to decide, so that the law may be applied to the particular case, the Court must decide on the operation of each. So, if the law be in opposition to the Constitution; if both the Court must either decide that case, or else leave it to the other departments to decide, the Court must decide which of these conflicting rules govern the case. The Court must decide which of these conflicting rules govern the case. This is the very essence of judicial duty. If, then, the Court is to regard the Constitution as superior to an ordinary act of the Legislature, the Constitution, and not some ordinary act, must govern the case to which they both apply.

Those, then, who controvert the principle that the Constitution is superior to an ordinary act of the Legislature, the Constitution, and not some ordinary act, must govern the case to which they both apply.

These, then, who controvert the principle that the Constitution is superior to an ordinary act of the Legislature, the Constitution, and not some ordinary act, must govern the case to which they both apply.

During a fight at White Oak church, Bath county, the night before Christmas Ollie Suedogar was cut and fatally injured by an unknown man.

Ed Donnelly, a farmer of Warren county, fled a Robert rifle at a chicken and killed Lucien Barnett, aged 15 years. The boy made his home with Donnelly.

William Friend, a steamboat engineer, was found dead at Louisville. He had frizzed to death. He was seen the evening before under the influence of liquor.

A month ago Will Mills and Alice Youkam, of Bell county, eloped and were married. Last week the husband was killed in a fight with Chris Turner. His widow is only 14 years old.

Major Will F. Johnson, of New Haven, Nelson county, shot and seriously wounded William Middleton Christmas day. Middleton was resisting arrest, and had attacked Johnson with a club.

Benji Arnett, a well-to-do farmer of Jessamine county, aged 58 years, was sent to the insane asylum at Lexington last week. His wife died a few days before, and it is believed this unbalanced his mind.

A horrible accident happened to Alvin Buckman, a young man of Boyle county. His dogs ran a coon into a hollow log. His gun, which was cocked, was laid aside and he made an effort to move the coon in order to have a little chase. The animal was moved and became engaged in a struggle with the dogs. Young Buckman hurriedly grabbed his gun and was preparing to shoot the coon, when he stumbled, letting the gun fall. The hammer struck the log and discharged the gun, the contents taking effect just above his right eye. A large portion of the skull was torn off and he died almost instantly.

At Hot Springs, Ark., Christmas day, Frank Dougherty, a race follower, shot and killed Jack Dosoubo, chief of detectives. Dougherty was shot by a boy as he fled and in desperation attempted to end his life by a shot in the head. He will not recover.

At Terre Haute, Ind., last week, Miss June Cadet, aged 17, was adjudged insane. She operated a type writer and last Spring while writing a business letter she made a mistake in her work. She brooded over it and became melancholy. The melancholy developed into insanity.

At Kansas City, Mo., Christmas day, Wm. P. Hollenback, while in a fit of rage caused by domestic troubles, shot his wife and killed Jack Hinkle, chief of detectives. Hinkle was shot by a woman as he lay in bed ill, drove his seven-year-old step-daughter into the street at the point of a revolver and then shot and killed her self. The wife was dangerously wounded.

At Pittsburgh, Kas., Christmas day, Montgomery Godley, a negro, was taken from the jail and hanged by a mob. At the first attempt to hang him the rope broke, and after his throat had been cut he was hanged a second time. Godley was accused of shooting Policeman Hinckle, who was trying to keep order at a negro dance. The lynching took place two hours after the killing of the officer.

On Christmas eve Mrs. Alfred Walker, living near Madison, Ind., went to the home of a neighbor a few minutes, leaving two children at home alone. When she returned her four-year-old daughter was in flames and died soon after from terrible burns. The mother made desperate efforts to save the child, and in doing so was badly burned. The little girl had tried to place some paper in the kitchen stove, climbing on a chair. She used her dress in lifting the lid and it was ignited by the flames.

The grant was declared to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, and in it the principle was settled that the power to regulate commerce rests exclusively in the general government, that full power to regulate commerce rests exclusively in the general government, and leaves no residuum. Fulton's steam-boat introduced a new era in navigation and commerce, and its influence has been far-reaching in the fortunes of individuals and nations, but that of the principles of law in our country which it served to settle? Have they not also been far-reaching in their application to new conditions?

To how many things not in existence then, indispensable to our commercial relations now, do they apply? The wonderful inventions and discoveries which have been made since that day, steam power upon the waters and steam power upon the land, the telegraph and telephone, and other appliances of our modern civilization, which have increased our commerce by the thousand-fold, were not foreseen or contemplated by the jurist who decided the case, yet we refer to its principles as authority for the settlement of the new questions which are presented by them. Conditions change, but principles remain, and adapt themselves to the varying phases of society. So it is the beauty and glory of our Constitution that, firm and stable in its essential principles, it has adapted itself without change to the new conditions which have arisen during our national life.

In all of our growth from four millions to seventy-five millions of people; from thirteen states to the present purchase of Louisiana to the recent purchase of the Philippine Archipelago; in all of our advancements in agriculture, and in commerce, interstate and international, no question has arisen that could not be met and easily settled by an appeal to the Constitution.

Elastic and adjustable to new conditions as they have been presented, it has in no wise lost its identity, or been weakened in its vitality.

GENERAL NEWS

It has been bitter cold in the East, seven persons were found frozen to death in six hours in Pennsylvania.

After spending Christmas pleasantly with her family, Mrs. Ella Swetland of St. Louis, killed herself by shooting. She had expressed a fear of paralysis, and it is believed she had a heart attack.

"We admit, as all must admit, that the powers of the government are limited and that limits are not to be transcended. But we think a sound interpretation of the Constitution gives the government a wide range of action.

"In this case the principle of construction of the Constitution, which has since been recognized and applied as follows:

"We admit, as all must admit, that the powers of the government are limited and that limits are not to be transcended. But we think a sound interpretation of the Constitution gives the government a wide range of action.

KENTUCKY NEWS.

Rev. James Lane Allen died at Danville, last week, in the 81st year of his age.

At Owensboro Friday, Ben Cutler was killed by Martin Connell. The trouble occurred in a saloon.

During a fight at White Oak church, Bath county, the night before Christmas Ollie Suedogar was cut and fatally injured by an unknown man.

Ed Donnelly, a farmer of Warren county, fled a Robert rifle at a chicken and killed Lucien Barnett, aged 15 years. The boy made his home with Donnelly.

William Friend, a steamboat engineer, was found dead at Louisville. He had frizzed to death. His clothes were threadbare and he is old and worn. He walks with a halting gait, the result of a slight stroke of paralysis several years ago. There is a haunted look on his face not good to see, and altogether he is but a shadow of his former self. Miss Marie and the little organ are no longer with him and he is, too, plainly a lonely broken old man, fighting the last half, and the losing half of the battle of life with the burden of age bearing down upon him and the consciousness of mistakes made knocking at the door of memory. Over twenty years ago I was one of delighted thousands always ready to listen to his words. In his prime, he was the greatest pulpit orator I ever heard. He preached in Boles' Hall every night while in Glasgow, and his audiences taxed the capacity of the building to the utmost. His sermons were magnificent; the music was entrancing! I was sitting by my sweetheart, and it was a fine show. What more could a young man not out of his teens, his heart full of love and his pockets full of money, want? C-ruel, I didn't wish for anything on earth more, except that my lady-love lived about two miles farther north. My love all comes back to me now. But Brother Barnes moved on, and time didn't stand still with any of us. Boles' Hall is gone, and the larger part of the congregation that gathered there have passed over the river. After a lapse of nearly a quarter of a century this man in God crosses the path of my life again. But it is not the same George O. Barnes. As I wrote the last paragraph a curious thought struck me, and it cut like a cold draught through a half-open door. Neither am I the same individual to whom Rev. George O. Barnes preached years ago. Then I was a careless boy. Now there is the frost of the autumn of life on my hair. By my side—thank God!—sits the mated woman now—the girl then—who drew me more powerfully to the Barnard meeting than did Barnes himself. From the cradle in one corner of the room issues a sound like unto a pig-squeaking. From a bed in another corner of the room comes another snore from a somewhat larger pig. There are four other Richardsons in those rooms upstairs, all snoring away to beat the band. I am not as young as myself. Perhaps Bro. Barnes might pronounce me a considerably changed man. Heigho! We are all getting old, and some of us are racing along toward the end of the world like a lot of blind horses. When the account is called for the final reckoning, I doubt not that Brother Barnes will have chosen the better part, for with all his vagaries and foolishness, he is good man. The last I heard of Mr. Barnes he was attempting to carry on a protracted meeting in Frankfort, and his audience was a mere handful. He is now a convert to Dowsism and is standing up as manfully for his creed of the old days. Miss Marie is keeping a boarding-house in Washington, while her father makes his headquarters at Dowie's Chicago Zion. May grace be with him. I shall never forget him as I have seen him in his prime throw his head back with a lionine air and sing "Ninety-nine and Nine."

Reep.,
TOBIAS HUFFAKER.

MADE THE BUTLER CAUSE.

& Host's Strанные Methods More & More alive Than Vanderville.

"While I was in Melbourne," said a Washingtonian who recently visited Australia on a business mission for a Philadelphia manufacturer, "I was present at a stag dinner given by an Englishman who had only a short time before struck it rich in the gold fields. He was middle-aged and a cockney of the cockneys. He had been poking around the auriferous hills of Australia with a pick for more than 20 years before he struck the ledge that made him a millionaire many times over.

"He was a bachelor, and when I got to Melbourne he had only recently got his magnificent domicile in the city. He had a dozen servants, the top man, of course, being a characteristically grave and imperious English butler, and a fellow as stiff as a lamp-post and with about as much humor in his carcase as a pine needle.

"The stag dinner was a pretty jolly affair. It was attended by about 20 well-known men-about-town of Melbourne, and some performers from the Melbourne vaudville theatre who engaged to entertain the guests.

"The English butler presided over the feast with the solemn manner befitting his kind.

The fun ran around the table like a breeze after the wine began to operate, but nary a grin crossed the features of the haughty butler. He stood at the sideboard as straight as a person can stand, with his arms folded, and his countenance was like a mask of tragedy when the host and all of the guests were all but rolling out of their chairs with laughter.

"I was sitting on the left of the host, and I observed that the preternatural gravity of the butler was grating on the host's nerves. Whenever the laughter was at its height the cockney millionaire would glance up from beneath his bushy eyebrows at the butler, only to perceive that not so much as a muscle of that dignitary's face was twitching.

"Blimee," I heard the host mutter savagely to his two or three intimates, "w'y don't that Cocknook cove larf?"

"Even when the vaudville people began to execute their cutups amidst the butler's stern silence the cockney chap, whose line of talk was screamingly funny, got the floor, and it wasn't long before he had every man at the table just a rocking and holding their sides. The host kept his eyes glued upon the butler's face to see if the professional entered, and when he was capable of drawing a grin out of his face. But it was no go. The butler stood like a rock. To all intents and purposes he might just as well have had paralysis of the facial nerves.

"The cockney host couldn't stand it any longer. He jumped out of his chair—showing that he was just a bit unsteady on his legs, which was natural enough, considering the way the corks had been popping—and rushing upon the butler and giving him a hearty, noisy, boisterous laugh. The impudent vaudville waiter then leaped over the butler's coat, dug the fingers of both his strong pudgy hands into the butler's ribs to tickle him, and bawled as he leaned over the man:

"Larff, larff, larff!"

Published Every Wednesday

Adair County News Co.
(INCORPORATED.)

CHAS. B. HARRIN, . . . . . Editor.

Democratic newspaper, devoted to the interests of the city of Columbia and the people of Adair and adjacent counties.

Received at the Columbia Postoffice as second class mail matter.

WED. JANUARY 7, 1903.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For State Treasurer.

We are authorized to announce H. H. HENNINGER, Wayne county, a candidate for the office of State Treasurer, subject to the election of the Democratic party.

The Hawaiian Islands are now connected with the United States by cable which was completed January 3rd. In a short time this cable will be extended to the Philippines.

Hon. Jas. D. Black, of Barberville, has published a card declining to enter the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Mr. Black had friends in Adair county who would have given him their support had he remained in the contest. We are sorry that his card evidenced soreness.

Conductor Keen, who was shot on an L. & N. train a few nights ago, while pulling into Louisville, identifies the photograph of Gus Hyatt, an escaped convict, as the man who did the shooting and attempted to rob the train. Several detectives, who have been at work on the case, pronounce the robbery story a fake.

The political prophet who circumscribes the available Democratic Presidential material to three eastern men, in our judgment, is a man figuring on an unknown quantity. No man can foretell who our nominees may be. The Democratic party covers the country and it possesses men of sterling ability and true statesmanship in every State of the union.

OZARK BRIEFS.

It snows one day, freezeth the next and then comes the rain. Thus passeth the time in these diggings. The new year has come and with its coming many resolutions have been made for the year. It is to be hoped that some say they will carry no more, but when plowing time comes and the ground does not plow as it should and the mule walks wrong then: "Come up there you old blanket blank fool you are." The "old blanket blank fool" is the name of the "old blanky blank carcass" starting the neighbor in the adjoining field for he thinks his satanic majesty is nigh. Others say they will not let the wine when it is red and straightaway they hunt business. The name of "white wine" because it is not red. These resolutions may be slightly excused inasmuch as they resulted under the influence of "pizen" from Lebanon or some other point where "bug juice" is handed out per instructions over the telephone, however, as the mail is too slow.

Mrs. W. F. Jeffries and daughter, Miss Mollie, of White Oak, visited in this community last Thursday.

Miss Lillian Holiday visited in Columbia last week.

Miss Jennie Garrett, of Columbia visited Mrs. J. M. Scott last week.

Mr. Moss, of Leatherwood, has been visiting Prof. J. H. Holliday several days.

Rev. W. B. Cave, accompanied by his wife, visited his brother, Mr. H. D. Cave last week.

Mrs. James Holliday and Thomas Dunbar are honeymooning having a few weeks in the winter for the purpose of saving a big amount of lumber to be used in fencing.

Clarence Montgomery offered four cents each for rabbits last week and the boys formed a skirmish line and were at it 'em. Judging from the number of shots fired in this immediate vicinity, there are not many rabbits left.

Mrs. Robert Cibell, who has been in poor health for several weeks does not improve.

Mr. Martin Cave, who has been visiting here for some time, left last Friday for his home in North Dakota.

Ed Garnett writes from western Oklahoma that the wind is blowing hard with icicles hanging to it and that old settlers claim this is the hardest winter they have experienced for years. Ed is a man who has traveled all over the world and is at work on his claims near Reed City in Woodford County.

Mr. James Holliday has been buying up a lot of young mules and now has twenty in his barn. A better lot of mules cannot easily be found anywhere. He will keep them for the southern market.

GRADYVILLE.

J. A. Diddle spent a day or so in Columbia last week.

J. H. Hunter took an inventory of his goods last week.

Mr. James Nelson, one of our best citizens, has moved in the community of Keltner.

J. H. Smith was at Burkville last week buying stock.

H. A. Moss, the popular slave man of Bakerton, was here a few days ago and informed us that his business last year would amount to $65,000.

Jo Lewis Garnett, of color, killed some eight month old hogs that net $300 each. If anybody can beat that, trot out them.

Geo. H. Nell sold his storehouse and lot in our city to Grady & Kemp for $300.

Miss Claudio Walker, a popular young lady of Nell, visited Miss Kate Walker last week.

The old year is gone and we merchants feel thankful to the public for the patronage given us in the past. We have all lived and can truthfully say that we have one week's provision ahead.

We have started in the new year with a full determination to live if we can. We are five in number, and we all expect to keep a full stock and sell cheap goods as can be bought. Call and see us.

The recent rains have made our roads almost impassable from here to the county seat, with any kind of conveyance. We trust in the near future we will be connected with the proposed electric car or a first-class pike leading to Columbia. We ridge people would be very thankful if the county court, who taxed us to build bridges over the high water courses, if it would compensate us a few dollars so we can put gravel on our roads or have our streets graded, so we can keep out of mud, as well as other people out of the water.

Mr. Strong Hill, who has his new business house almost completed, has sold Mr. Titus Mercer, of Camp Knox, one-half interest, and they will open a first class mercantile store in a few days. All we have got to say is, there is room at the top.

Eld. Z. T. Williams will preach for us Friday night before the 4th

Sunday in this month. Everybody comes out and hears him.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Hindman, at their hospitable home one day last week, entertained the following named persons: G. Whit Flowers and wife, W. C. Hindman and wife, J. W. Townsend and wife, Madam Sam Mitchell, W. A. Wilmore, Misses Pearl Hindman, Mollie Caldwell, Mrs. W. M. Wilmore and daughters, Mrs. Curt Hindman, B. A. and J. A. Wilmore. The day was pleasantly spent, and the dinner was enjoyed that was prepared by the good lady of the house.

Prof. Garfield Flowers is in Louisville this week.

KNIFLEY.

Some fighting occurred in our town during Christmas. J. R. Beard and E. K. Bottom got into fight but neither were very badly hurt. Rev. Tucker was cut and stabbed by John Arnold's son.

Our town is getting too reckless. Our citizens will have to take steps to stop such conduct if they want to bring their children up in the best society.

Mr. A. Salles has moved to the property he bought of S. H. Knifley.

Bro. W. S. Dodgeon preached at Freedom Sunday. The church has employed him for this year.

Mr. J. A. Beard and Miss Bettie Williams were married at the home of the bride. We extend congratulations.

Mr. I. O. Job, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hendrickson, Mr. Ebby Beard and Miss Vergie Hendrickson.

H. E. Chandler and family visited at Campbellsville Christmas week.

PLEASE TELL.

I saw a brute come down the road resting beneath a brutal load, For his poor back a man bestrode And on his heel were a goad. The brute was weak, the man was strong.

The farmer short, the latter long, And in his hand he held a shog.

To lash the faithful brute along.

While he with brutal pride elite Was riding by in mimic state.

The brute submissive to his fate, Was ambling onward in his gait.

A pocket of the Balaam clan.

Will you please tell us if you can Which was most brute or man?

Mr. T. E. Farmer, the Editor of the News, left Saturday in a most agreeable manner. He called the afraid quill-driver into his place of business, demanded a look at his knife and finding it some what worn, he stepped to one of his show cases, took a sharp pocket knife and handed him the knife we have seen for many a day and presented it with his compliments.

The value of the knife is not the consideration, but the manner in which it was presented and the unexpected manner in which it was received.

The popularity of the recently prize it highly because it is as a token of true, genuine friendship and a well-matched couple insures a number of handsome and valuable presents.

We are not advised as to the plans of the contracting parties, but we take it that they will be entertained at the home of the groom's parents, in this city, then go to Greensburg, which will be their home until the wedding.

The News joins their many friends in wishing them happiness and prosperity so long as they both may live.

GUARDS ATTENTION.

The following letter has been received relative to the company of state guards at this place:

Adjutant General's Office,

Frankfort, Ky. Dec. 29, 1902.

Mr. James M. Scott,

Columbia, Ky.

My Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your letter of the 2nd inst., addressed to Gen. David R. Murray and replying to same will say that Gen. Murray at present is out of the state and will not be in until the first of the year. As to the proposed guard mounting as you will say that prospects are very good at present, but I am unable to say positively, as it may be the State now has the limit. Upon the return of Gen. Murray I will call attention to the matter.

Young man, if you have made the usual resolutions we admonish you to keep them in strict trust.

It is better not to vow than to break a誓言.

Any person can resolve but it takes firmness and worth to live up to our high ideals that we usually resolve at the beginning of the year.

The young man who resolves not to swear, not to smoke in order to develop habits may find it takes will power and determination to resist temptations, but if you are steadfast to your good resolutions you will be successful.

Miss Debbie Corbin, a sister of the bride, and Mr. Elsey Young were the attendants. The wedding march was beautifully played by Mr. Cora Young. Refreshments were served in the parlor of the groom's parents where they will reside.

The party given at the residence of Mr. Art Walker last Thursday night was largely attended, and all present report a delightful time.

Farewell drinks so high and handy.

What a blessing it would be to some individuals to obtain from me use of some of my old books. Who wants them?

Their parents and their community.

Life is fast passing. This will be reached probably at an unexpected hour.

THURSDAY GREENSBURG.

A representative of the News was at Greensburg last week. In conversing with the merchants and druggists he learned that they all did a good business during the year 1902. They enter upon the New Year with a determination to largely increase their sales.

SHOULD WOMEN PROPOSE.

Speaking of marriage, the case of Mrs. Leach is interesting. Mrs. Leach owns a ranch at the Antelope Valley, California. She's married to her second husband. Her first husband was "a nice, quiet, simple old gentleman, and that's all there was to him." But her second husband—well! She was told of him by her lawyer and she went after him.

She introduced herself to his business and they were married. All went well while she loaned him money, but later, when she wished to go visiting, he put his foot down, and, when she insisted, he got a switch and thrashed her all the way to where she was going a mile and a half and "he was back again. All this she told in a Los Angeles court when she tried to get a divorce, but she was turned down by the judge, as she had nobody to substantiate her story and her husband denied it. This story would seem to answer the question "Should women propose?" If Mrs. Leach was going to her club when she was switched there are husbands who would endorse the action of her husband—rude, vulgar men, of course, with no culture about them.

SOME ANSWERS.

The Editor of the Winchester Democrat sent out circular letters to a large number of married men subscribers and asked them why they married. Here are some of the answers:

I didn't intend to do it.

That's the same fool question my friends ask me.

Because I did not have the experience I have now.

I yearned for company. Now we have it all the time.

That's what I've been trying for 11 years to find out.

I married to get even with her mother but never have.

I thought it would be cheaper than buying a house myself.

Because Tessie told me that five other men had proposed to her.

Because I asked her to have me; she said she would; I think she's got me.

I wanted a companion of the opposite sex. N. B. She is still opposite.

The old man was going to give me his foot, so I took his daughter's hand.

Because I thought she was one among a thousand, now I think she is a thousand among one.

I was lonesome and melancholy and wanted someone to make me lively.

I have exhausted all the figures in the arithmetic to find an answer to your question; between multiplication and division in the family and distraction in addition, the answer is hard to arrive at.

THE SCHOOL BOOK TRUST.

The battle for cheaper school-books in the hands of the 800,000 children of Kentucky has already begun. It will be concluded only when the next legislature adjourns. If it is not then successful, the contest will be waged before the succeeding legislature, and the next, and the next, until the children and parents win. The fight will be sharp, but the issue should not be doubted. On one side stand every child and every mother and father in the State; on the other concentrated capital, a powerful lobby and every conceivable, corrupting influence.

The book-trust has been forced out of its monopoly and driven to direct competition in North Carolina, Louisiana, Texas and Tennessee and generally throughout northern States. It holds to its monopoly in a few States of the South and West, and for this continued control it will fight to the last ditch, especially in Kentucky where another victory means at least two years more of fat pickings and probably clinches its hold for a long period to come. It triumphed over Governor Beckham in the last legislature; if it wins out in the next, opposition will be disheartened and weakened. If Kentucky is ever to cease being a fruitful field for the operations of the book-trust; if the manipulations of the trust, by which the children of the State are forced to pay from thirty-five to fifty per cent., above fair prices for school-books, are to be put an end to, then the newspapers of the State must take hold of the subject in earnest. If they do not, public sentiment will not be thoroughly aroused, and the book-trust will proceed without mercy with its work of holding up the 800,000 children of the State. It is a skin game, a mean game, a thoroughly disreputable game—a robbery not only of men but of women and children; but this will not in the least deter those engaged in the shameful work of extortion. If the newspapers of Kentucky do their duty, the book-trust can be run out of the State.

A state uniformity law, coupled with a straight competition in bidding, means a reduction of from thirty to fifty per cent. in the price of all school-books, and this means a saving each year of from $400,000 to $500,000 to Kentucky parents—Glasgow time.

KILLED HIS SISTER.

In Central City Sunday at nine o'clock, a happy home was plunged into deepest mourning in a twinkling. At this hour James Sexton, Jr., a lad of but fifteen years, shot and instantly killed his sister Ada, a bright little girl of but eight years. The shooting was purely accidental.

The children were those of James Sexton, a carpenter and contractor, who resided on Jefferson Avenue between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and Mr. Sexton is an honest industrious man, in fact one of the city's best citizens. The accident which cast a gloom over the entire community occurred this way. James, the youth who has a fondness for shot guns, recently purchased a fine loading gun. Sunday morning he concluded to give it a thorough cleaning. He was not aware that the gun was loaded, and of course was handling it recklessly. His little sister, who had just completed her toilet preparatory to going to Sunday School, entered the room and an instant later there was a deafening report and the innocent girl fell lifeless to the floor, almost the entire left side of her head being blown away. The bulk of the charge had entered just to the left of her nose. The sight was too horrible in the extreme. Neighbors soon reached the scene and took charge of the remains until the undertaker arrived. A coroner's jury was later empaneled and their verdict was in accordance with the above facts.

The funeral occurred at two o'clock this afternoon and was conducted by Rev. A. D. Craig, pastor of the Central City M. E. church. The burial was at Hull's cemetery.—Boyd county Democrat.

A Marvelous Invention.

Wonders never cease. A machine has been invented that will cut, paste and hang wall paper. The field of inventions and discoveries seems to be unlimited. Notable among great discoveries is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It has done a world of good for weak lungs and saved many a life. Thousands have used it and conquered Grip, Bronchitis Pneumonia and Consumption. Their general verdict is: "It's the best and most reliable medicine for throat and lung troubles. Every 50c and $1.00 bottle is guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free.

Maj. Ed Hughes has resigned as chief of the fire department of Louisville after 22 years of valuable service.

WONDERFUL NERVE

It is displayed by many a man enduring pain of accidental cuts, wounds, burns, scalds, sore feet or stiff joints. But there is no need for it. Bucklin's Arctic Salve will kill the pain and cure the trouble. It's the best salve on earth for piles, too. 25¢ at all druggists.

Warden Lillard, of the Frankfort penitentiary, gave his prisoners 1,000 pounds of turkey for Christmas dinner.

TRIED TO CONCEAL IT.

It's the old story of "murder will out" only in this case there's no crime. A woman's feet run down, backache or dyspepsia and thinks it's nothing and tries to hide it until she finally breaks down. Don't deceive yourself. Take Electric Bitters once. It has a reputation for curing Scurvy, Liver and Kidney troubles and will revivify your whole system. The worst forms of those maladies will quickly yield to the curative power of Electric Bitters. Only 50c, and guaranteed by all druggists.
